Player Types		Fish – Typically a weak player, tends to call and check a lot rather than raise and bet. Not a winning strategy. The more Fish you have at your table, the more profitable your game will be.
		Good Player (Tight) – This is the kind of player you want to avoid. When he enters the pot he usually has a hand and plays it very aggressively.
		Gambler – Tends to bet and raise a lot. You want to have this person to your right in order to avoid entering pots with calling hands only to be raised by a Gambler.
		Rock – Only enters a pot if he has a hand. If a Rock raises you'd better fold because he is holding a monster.
		Calling Station – Calling Station tends to be in fewer pots than Fish. But once he is in the pot a Calling Station will continue to call you to the end. There is no need to slow-play a Calling Station – if you have a hand, bet aggressively. Don't try to bluff him – he won't fold.
		Loose Aggressive – This is the kind of player you want to have to your right. At the slightest hint of a weakness, Loose Aggressives will raise and re-raise, even with marginal hands, in order to avoid a showdown.
		Loose Passive – This player will enter too many pots and play his hands passively. Play him aggressively.
		Tight Aggressive – Plays his hands selectively and aggressively. Most good players play this style. Have them to your right and get involved with them when you have a premium hand.
		Tight Passive – Hardly enters the pot and hardly raises or initiates action. Perfect target for blind stealing.
		Wild – Reckless, aggressive player who plays a lot of pots. You should always have him to your right. Pick your spots and enter pots when you have a hand. He might get lucky hitting hands with garbage, but in the long run your patience will pay off. to get out.
		Super Tight – Plays predominantly premium hands. If Super Tight enters a pot, he has a good hand.
		Good Player (Loose) – Hard to play against. He might be in more pots than you would expect, but he knows when to get out.
